Teton Valley Health Care is pleased to welcome Jake Poulter, M.D., Pain Management and Anesthesiology, to the Driggs Health Clinic team of physician specialists.

Dr. Poulter received his medical degree from the University of Utah. He continued his post-doctoral training with a residency in anesthesiology at the University of New Mexico, and returned to the University of Utah to complete a prestigious fellowship in chronic pain management.

As a specialist who provides pain relief, Dr. Poulter sees patients who suffer from lower-back problems, arthritis, cancer, repetitive stress injuries, headaches, and fibromyalgia as well as nerve injury from diabetes, shingles, infections, operations, amputation or other neurological conditions.

As a member of the Idaho Pain Group, Dr. Poulter also helps improve patient functionality and quality of life through a multi-disciplinary approach. Team members evaluate functional and behavioral components, which enable him to prescribe the best medication combination or interventional techniques. Each patient plays an important role in the treatment process as they describe their pain, needs, and concerns. By being a good doctor, listener, and communicator, Dr. Poulter is able to develop a unique treatment plan and then explain to his patients how they will benefit from the plan.

He has a black belt in karate, enjoys exercise, scouting, and spending time with his family in the great outdoors.

To make an appointment with Dr. Poulter please call Driggs Health Clinic at 354-2302.
